Jellyfish is a Scout ship from the future and another dimension. It was once piloted by Ambassador Spock on his mission to save Romulus from destruction in prime reality. Since its arrival in this dimension, jellyfish has been extensively studied by the Scientists Federation for its extremely advanced technology. Despite being a high-tech vessel, the jellyfish was designed as a relatively weak defense and has a relatively weak defense and is now commonly used as a fast Explorer. you can also find them on the Missions page and follow the All Missions link. Star Trek Fleet Command is a huge game: you have to control the fleet instead of one ship. In other words, there should always be more than one ship in your fleet, and each of them must take on different tasks. So it's important to know how to get more ships and how to use them. As a fleet commander, you have to choose your ships wisely to bring peace to the galaxy. In this guide, we'll do it exactly and talk about where you need to pay attention to a successful fleet commander. Ships and drydocks You can add more ships to your fleet. But each ship needs a separate dry sock. At the beginning of the game, you get one drydock for free and start with one boat. The second dry sock opens when you complete fleet commander research. You can have 5 drydocks and 5 ships in total. (This research requires that you can use ever larger amounts of Dilithium and Parsteel.) However, building new dry wedges is not something you can do right away. As we mentioned in our Star Trek Fleet Command review, every building and research is linked together. For example, to start researching a fleet commander, you must first building a Level 17 operation. You can't build this building before reaching the mid-game phase. In short, be patient: You will have a large fleet, but not immediately. Construction ships When you unlock a new dry net, you will need to assign a ship here. You have to build every ship in your fleet. It's not an easy and short-term job. First, remember that each ship has a specific scheme. Even now there are more than 100 ships in the game, which means that you need more than 100 schemes. Schemes are like plans. To build a ship, you must first find its scheme. So, how do you do that? There is more than one way to find the scheme of the ship. These are: The complete story of the mission. You will automatically unlock some of the ships when you get to a certain point in the story quests. Some of these ships are of rare quality and to get them, all you have to do is play the game. Complete research. Class 2 Ship Research allows you to get one plan for each ship in that class. However, there are many prerequisites for starting this research. You can also unlock some ships directly by researching. Play Star Trek Fleet Command on your PC to destroy your enemies. Schemes of the rarest ships can be found in boxes of prey, which are obtained after the destruction of enemy ships or other players' ships on the system screen. It is also possible to purchase these loot boxes for real money. You can see the loot boxes you have on the inventory screen. In any case, it is possible to get all the ships in the game for free and only by playing the game. It will take a long time, but if you are patient enough, you can do it. To learn how to get a specific ship, click it to see the details box. Class ships There is a reason why you have so many You can use each one for a different job. There are 4 classes of ships in total: Explorer: Standard class ships used for reconnaissance missions. At the beginning of the game, one of them is given for free. Their fighting power and speed are average. Interceptor: Probably the best ship class in the game. Interceptor class ships can be used in equal efficiency for combat and reconnaissance missions. Throughout the game, there are only 5 Interceptor class ships. Battleship: These ships should only be used for combat missions. Their speed is very low, but their armor is quite high. Reconnaissance: These are completely useless for combat missions, but are perfect for reconnaissance missions. Their speed is high, but they have almost no armor. Ideally, each class of ship must be present in your fleet. In this way, for example, reconnaissance ships can do reconnaissance missions, and interceptor ships can take on combat missions - all at the same time. Most of the ships you will find will belong to the Explorer class, and the Interceptor will be the hardest class to find. Modernization of ships Once you have acquired a ship, you can make it a stronger modernization. The upgrade system is quite complex and involves the location of officers. However, we will talk about the officers in our Battle System guide. Here, let's talk about how you can increase your ship's tier. To run an upgrade operation, you must dock the ship to the stargate. Then click Manage to get started. Each ship has level levels. You start the game with a tier 1 ship, but you can upgrade. The increase in the level increases both the level and the main statistics of the ship. Each level consists of 4 stages and each ship has 4 equipment. You must fill all these slots to increase the level. This requires you to always be able to use two components: Tritanium and class parts. You should use Explorer parts for ship class Explorer, Battleship Parts for ship class battleships, and so on. In other words, each class of ship has its own special parts. When you fill all the slots, the ship level automatically increases. You can't produce the parts needed for this process, but you can get them out of in-game activities and combat missions. There is also an option to buy for real money. So you can have all the Star Trek Fleet Command ships for free, but you have to work hard to raise their levels. Fortunately, it's worth it: Theoretically, you can even make an Explorer class ship as efficient as interceptor class by completing all levels of upgrades. Initially, we recommend that you upgrade your first ship to level 3. This ship will take you to the middle game stage without any problems. Want to know more about Star Trek Fleet Command? To learn more, read the guide we have prepared about the combat system. In this guide, we talk about officers who are of great importance in terms of ship management and power, or take a look at our Tips and Tricks guide to find out all the ways easily increase the performance of your fleet.
